Thanks

First, I'd like to thank all the M.A. students, too many unfortunately to mention by name, from many different countries, who have discussed the ideas in this book with me over the past five years. This has been a tremendous learning experience for me, and I am deeply in their debt.

Secondly, I am grateful to my colleagues in Moray House College, who have provided such a stimulating environment for developing educational ideas. I am particularly grateful to Gordon Kirk, Principal of Moray House College, and to Margot Cameron-Jones, Head of the Department of Teaching Studies, who first introduced me to the concept of Reflective Practice. Their influence is pervasive in this book. I am also grateful to some of my colleagues from the Scottish Centre for Education Overseas, namely David Carver, Patricia Ahrens and Iain McWilliam, who have also shared many of their thoughts with me; likewise to Paquita McMichael, Head of the Department of Social Science and Social Studies, and Jim Kidd of the Teaching Studies Department. Thanks also to Esther Dunbar, formerly of Basil Paterson College, Edinburgh, to Robin McKenzie, Principal of Basil Paterson's, and to the other tutors past and present of that college who have cooperated in demonstrating Reflective Practice: I am very much in their debt.

Once more, I am grateful to the library staff of Moray House for their unstinting help: in particular to Liz Leitch, Margaret McKay and David Fairgrieve, with a special vote of thanks to Hazel Robertson for her advice and assistance.

I'd also like to record here my appreciation to Roger Bowers for making many helpful suggestions; to Ruth Gairns for her detailed reading of the text – her suggestions have greatly improved the impact of the book; to Annemarie Young of Cambridge University Press for her patience and understanding during the production of the manuscript; and also to Alison Silver for the benefit of her considerable editorial expertise.

Thanks also to Carole Jackson for handling the typing so cheerfully and efficiently. Thanks (as always) to my wife Eileen for her unfailing support.
