Supplementary Appendix for Science and Reading in the Eighteenth Century: the Hardwicke Circle and the Royal Society, 1740-1766 (Cambridge: Cambridge University Press, 2023)

This relational bibliography has been created from the ‘Weekly Letter Reading Database’, described below, and is distributed free as a pdf under a creative commons license. It lists all the texts noted in the Weekly Letter, as analysed in Science and Reading in the Eighteenth Century: the Hardwicke Circle and the Royal Society, 1740-1766. As a simple and robust solution it is distributed by pdf.

The ‘Weekly Letter’ was a private correspondence written from 1741 to 1766 between Thomas Birch (1705-1766), Secretary of the Royal Society from 1752 to 1765, and Philip Yorke (1720-1790), second earl of Hardwicke from 1764. It comprises 687 letters in total, 433 of which were written by Birch, together with 254 replies by Yorke (British Library Add Mss 35,396-35,400). The analysis here focuses on a five-year case study from 1750 to 1754, during which the correspondents exchanged 139 letters (93 from Birch, 46 from Yorke), as well as a further 8 enclosures. These letters were read and examined for evidence of reading: they yielded 842 ‘reading event’ data points. A ‘reading event’ is defined as any mention or discussion of the reading of textual material, including printed books, pamphlets, tracts, maps, engraved prints, newspapers, periodicals, plays, poems, novels, and print ephemera; manuscript letters, drafts, and transcriptions; and collections of manuscripts, letters, and print, including whole libraries. It also includes material that was read aloud, and lectures heard at learned institutions. ‘Reading events’ note each iteration of that event, noting each text in each letter.

The bibliography relates each reading event to the letter in which it appears, with a separate entry for each letter in the Weekly Letter. Texts were manually identified against titles in the ESTC, BNF, or, in the case of manuscripts, relevant library catalogues. In addition, each data point is tagged with: (i) a standardized identifier of format (for example book, manuscript, periodical, Royal Society meeting); (ii) a brief summary, where possible, of the topic of the text. Each data point is also given its original unique identifier number in the Weekly Letter Reading Database.
